"UNDESIRABLE CITIZENS."

The Brooklyn Times, Republican, comes forward with the following suggestion: "Reasonable citizens remember that when President Roosevelt, in his letter to Congressman Wadsworth, classed Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone with Harriman as 'undesirable citizens,' the expression was used in a private letter, and was never intended to see the light."

The Times is far, far astray. For reasons not necessary to recite the president and Congressman Wadsworth were not in correspondence last winter and spring. The phrase "undesirable citizens" came into current speech about the beginning of last April at the time of the publication of E. H. Harriman's private letter to Sidney Webster—an incident that stirred the Rooseveltian energy to volcanic activity. During the period of eruption there was an extraordinary scene at the white house whither the president had summoned Washington representatives of leading newspapers in order that his side of the Harriman story should be published. The president was earnest, emphatic, excited, and exclamatory. In an outburst of wrath he declared:

"Harriman and Rockefeller are backing Hearst, and I want to put Hearst, Debs, Haywood, Moyer and Harriman in the same class as anarchists and undesirable citizens. The fight is against me and my policies. It is on in Ohio, Pennsylvania and other states."

This was something radically different from a "private letter never intended to see the light." It was the apex of Rooseveltian indiscretion. It was a great shock to the personal friends of the president; and probably he himself was chagrined when he came to consider the matter in a calmer condition of mind.

Possibly the historian may hereafter designate the amazing performance as the turning-point of the president's popularity. Apart from his grouping of "undesirable citizens" his autocratic defiance of those members of his own party who are not disposed to bow down to "me and my policies" made a very disagreeable and lasting impression on the public mind—so much so that it is now commonly said that in his race for the presidential nomination Secretary Taft is seriously handicapped because he is the recognized first choice of President Roosevelt.

JUDICIAL USURPATION.

There is no more live topic than the usurpation of power by courts. "Government by injunction" has become no idle phrase. It seems at times as if there was no function of the government that courts would not interfere with.

The theory of our governments, both national and state, is that there are three co-ordinate branches of government—legislative, executive and judicial. Unless the assumption of power by certain judges is quickly ended there will be but one department—the judicial. It will have absorbed all power and we will have become a judicial oligarchy.

All well-wishers of our government should join in condemning these wrongful assumptions of power by the courts.

Recently, Judge Swan, in the United States court at Detroit, enjoined the city council from passing ordinances regulating street car traffic in that city. The injunction was granted in a suit brought by the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, trustee for bonds issued by the Detroit United Railway. The defendants were the city of Detroit, its mayor, attorneys and members of its city council, and also the Detroit United Railway. The action is so extraordinary that the very language of the court had better be used.

"It is hereby ordered: (a) That the several defendants above named, other than the Detroit United Railway, be, and they, and each of them are hereby enjoined and restrained until the further order of the court from doing any act or taking any steps in the enactment or passage of the proposed ordinance called 'Hally ordinance' or enacting or passing any ordinance of substantially the same import, or any proposed ordinance of which said ordinance called 'Hally ordinance' has been proposed as a substitute or amendment."

It must be remembered that the city council is a part of the legislative department of the government. The state legislature delegates to its the power to regulate certain local affairs. The court might just as well enjoin the state legislature from passing a law as to enjoin the city council from passing an ordinance.

Courts have power to pass upon the validity and meaning of laws and ordinances after they have been enacted. The legislative department has exclusive authority to enact them. This distinction is fundamental and vital. When a court intervenes and enjoins the legislative department from enacting any measure, it is guilty of usurpation.

The setting aside of the injunction by the reviewing court may be no remedy at all. Suppose that the existing city council and mayor are honest, capable and wide-awake to the city's interests. The next officers that come in may be subservient to the street railway company. If the hands of the present officers can be tied by an injunction, the injury may be irreparable and a reversal by an upper court an idle thing.—Cleveland Press.

Anger listeners some of the audience were moved to tears and others found vent for their emotions in applauding to the echo.

And when the immense chorus, the orchestra and the audience all united in singing "America," no one could doubt but that the Swiss were as loyal as any to the land of their adoption.

With that song closed one of the most successful musical festivals of the Central Singing societies. Today the business meeting will be held in Schweitzer's hall on Cherry street and at noon the parade will take place and then all will go to Meyers lake where the social part of the convention will be held and the prizes will be awarded.

LATE ALLIANCE NEWS

Alliance, O., Aug. 4.—The Lake Park Chautauqua closed with the session Sunday evening, the attendance during the day being the largest perhaps of any of the ten days. The majority of the twenty-one sessions were interesting and instructive and met with the approval of the audiences.

Sunday's program opened at 2:30 o'clock, when Grace Toy and Mrs. Effie Hamilton Caskey favored the assembly with vocal solos. At 3 p. m. Hon. G. W. Thompson, of Marion, Ind., gave his lecture, "The Trial of Jesus from a Legal Standpoint." At 6 p. m. a Chautauqua vesper service was held. This was followed by vocal selections by Grace Toy and Effie Caskey. The evening address was by Dr. Charles W. Blodgett, whose subject was "The Apparent Conflict of Science and Religion."

The officers and members of Company K, Eighth Infantry, O. N. G., are already preparing for the annual encampment which will be held at Port Clinton beginning August 18. The time will be devoted to work on the rifle range and guard duty. The local members have been ordered to familiarize themselves with the general orders and duties of a sentinel on duty.

Sunday afternoon a number of the members spent a few hours on the company's rifle range near Maximo. Every member will be required to shoot the specified amount at camp.

The company will be in command of the newly elected captain, U. S. Wetzel.

The annual reunion of the Greenamyer family will be held at Lake Park near this city, Wednesday, August 21.

The Parker shows which are to appear in Massillon this week, passed through Alliance on a special train Sunday evening at 6 o'clock. Next week the Smith show appears in Alliance under the auspices of the Knights of Pythians.

PITCHFORK

Will Figure Prominently in Divorce Case of Wronged Wife.

Anna Zsoldos on Saturday morning filed a petition in common pleas court asking for a dissolution of the marriage contract existing between herself and her husband, Franz Zsoldos, and for an order of court restoring her maiden name.

She says they were married in June, 1893, at Nagy Rakos, Hungary, and that no children have been born of their marriage. She says that in May, 1906, her husband, without any provocation whatever, struck her with a pitchfork across her arms and chest and that he struck and beat her in the face at other times until her eyes were discolored. She charges gross neglect of duty and the common necessities of life. Habitual drunkenness for more than twelve years is another ground alleged by the wife against her husband. Craine & Snyder, attorneys.

Army Transport Returns to Port.

San Francisco, Aug. 4.—The army transport Warren arrived in tow this morning. She sailed for Manila, but when 50 miles out her steam tubes developed so much weakness that the chief engineer refused to go further. It seems her tubes gave way permitting salt water to mix with fresh. Captain Bellinger, head of the transport service here, declared that the Warren would only be delayed one day as she went into dock promptly after her arrival.

NOT WORRIED

By Immense Fine Imposed on Oil Trust is Rockefeller—Talked With Reporters Unconcernedly.

IS STILL PLAYING GOLF

Cleveland, Aug. 4.—If Judge Landis' decision has been a great blow to John D. Rockefeller, he does not show it. Bright, almost blithe, and with a joke on his lips, as he spoke, he attended service at the Euclid avenue Baptist church this morning. "There is nothing to say about the decision, is there?" he queried good naturedly when pressed to discuss it. Then he backed up to the church aisles to a safe position from his interviewers, lingering just long enough to impress upon their minds the necessity of being prompt tomorrow morning in keeping their engagement with him to play golf.

"I am an early riser, you know," he said, with a laugh. "I suppose with you newspaper men eight o'clock is an early hour and an unearthly hour. But you know that it was the early worm that was caught. I found the hour however the best to meet my friends at any rate," he continued, more seriously. "I have a great deal to do you know, and about the only time I have for conversation is during a golf game. There are many excellent golfers in Cleveland and I have been quite happy with them, I assure you."

Mr. Rockefeller drove to church this morning. He rode in his new automobile which he purchased here this spring. On the road he picked up a friend. When he arrived at the church the Sunday school services had been completed. He listened to the sermon of Rev. John Wilson, and remained to the communion services. To all appearances he was just as popular among his acquaintances at the church as he was before Judge Landis to severely denounced the company of which he is the head and founder. He was the center of a large group of handshakers, and remained for several minutes exchanging greetings. He shook hands with a friend whom he had not seen for some time and inquired where he had been. "I have just come from North Carolina, Mr. Rockefeller," the man replied. "They are going after the trust down there too." The oil magnate smiled slightly, replying: "Keeping them going along the line, eh?" Then he stepped into his automobile with Rev. Wilson, whom he was entertaining at dinner.

The concert given in the tent on the school lawn Saturday evening by local talent was a financial success, netting about $12.

Miss Clara Hughes returned to Youngstown Friday, after a week's visit with friends and acquaintances here.

Who has not at times had ideas which he or she would like to see in some newspaper? Many a good thought has slumbered in the brain of the thinker because of the difficulties and rebuffs which are always supposed to lie in the path to the editorial sanctum. THE CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD, however, welcomes such ideas, and has a page in its Sunday issue called "The Battle Ground of Modern Thought," which is devoted exclusively to letters from its readers. The best articles received each week are carefully edited and printed over the writers' names. The amount of really valuable matter that finds its way into the department is remarkable and is proof that the ability to write well and entertainingly is not confined to professional writers. The only restriction THE RECORD-HERALD puts upon writers for this interesting page is that articles must be of a controversial nature and devoted to the discussion of some current topic.

PLAYING RULES

Agitation Started to Change Some of Them.

"Although the rules and regulations under which professional baseball games are played are regarded as so near letter perfect that important changes are made in them only at very long intervals, there are a good many many intelligent and faithful fans and intelligent and zealous players who would hail with delight two or three sweeping innovations," says Elmer Bates in the Cleveland Press.

"It is surprising how many of the professional ball players and how many of the observing patrons of the game believe that the error column should be eliminated entirely. Although but one argument is used in support of their contention, it is both logical and convincing—the good effect it would have on that large class of players who side-step the desperate fielding chances for fear of getting into the error column."

"It isn't difficult at all to call to mind the names of a score of players in the American league whose work would be immeasurably improved if there were no error column to fear. Almost every team has one or two men who let the desperate chances go by, when the odds are about 4 to 1 that an error would follow an attempt to get the ball."

"There is another indictment that might be returned against the error column and that is the injustice that it does to the player who goes after everything regardless of its effect on his fielding averages."

"Smith, half asleep, slow, careless, takes no chances, while Jones, painstaking, always alert and dashing after everything within possible reach, gets charged with 15 errors in the same number of what are called chances. His average is .850."

"In the table of averages, Smith, the sullen looks to be a much better player than Jones, the winning player."

"Another change in the rules that is coming sooner or later is the addition of a column that will show how many bases the runners were advanced by each batter, and how many runs each batter sent over the plate."

"This rule is the one that should have been adopted long ago. The real test of a batter's ability is to hit the ball safe when men are on bases and when the pitcher is using all his strength and strategy to prevent the ball from being batted out of the diamond."

"Under such a rule players would work less for personal batting averages than for run getting for their team. Like the elimination of the error column a rule giving batters credit for advancing base runners and driving in runs would make the success of his team every player's first consideration."

Strange Animal Killed.
Findlay, O., Aug. 4.—When Mrs. Minnie Missamore was hoeing potatoes her attention was attracted by the barking of a dog, which stood near the river bank. Peering into the bushes near by Mrs. Missamore discovered a strange-looking animal crouching in the bushes and ready to spring upon her. She urged on her faithful dog, which is a large St. Bernard, but he was no match for the strange animal.

Mrs. Missamore then ran screaming toward the home of Henry Litzberger, and alarmed the neighborhood. Litzberger, with a well-directed aim, laid low the animal, which resembles a wolf, but those who have seen it say it is not one.
